

11-16-08 Sunday

Tony:

This is our last day in Foya, tomorrow we leave for the first outreach on the way back to Monrovia. This morning there was a little ceremony outside the place we are staying. They had 3 huge piles of clothes on plastic on the ground. They were the clothes that the team brought for the people and some that the church in Monrovia sent. They were to be distributed to the needed people in Foya, Sierra Leone and Guinea (a French speaking country that was represented at the conference). Blessings come to all of you, from the natives here that sowed into the provision for this trip.

We then went to a small church for the day's service. Worship, the Word then into words of knowledge. There were maybe 300 people in this little place today. Interesting how we gave just a few words and about everybody came up. It appears that it didn't matter what word we gave, if they needed healing they were coming up.

The healings were happening with lightning speed and pretty much everyone received a miracle. My favorite was this really old lady. She couldn't lift her arms at all. She had been that way for a long time, in pain. When the anointing hit her, she was ecstatic. She looked like me doing the happy dance.

It was nice that the deaf/mutes waited until the end. But, every one of them got their hearing back. It took us working as a team, with all getting in there on the praying, but Praise God, what a day!

We gave out prizes to the kids, a piece of candy is like Christmas to them!

Many wanted their pictures taken with us. That is how we ended our ministry time today.

Harvey

I spent the time during ministry videoing a steady stream of people coming up to give testimony of their healing. The anointing must have really been flowing because as soon as the team started to pray it was a continual flow of people coming up to give testimony of their healing. Awesome!!!! All of the prayer warriors out there are sure doing good, Thank you thank you thank you!!! Later

Casey:

Ehehhhhh!!! This is more like it!!! Today was a thanksgiving service where I ended up being extremely thankful. After Tony preached this morning, he released us to give words of knowledge for one last time in Foya. I got a word of knowledge for pain in the left elbow and six people responded to that word. Some thought their shoulder was their elbow but that's okay, it was close enough. I was just extremely excited that the Holy Spirit was moving in a superfast healing anointing today. It was as if the air was supercharged. Kachow! That was Arlene rubbing off on me. Haha. As I prayed for the people with elbow pain, it was as if it was only taking seconds for the healings to come and in a matter of minutes, all six were healed and on their way to the alter to give testimonies. Then Reverend Kettor came over and asked if he could pray with me. What a difference it makes when two are in total agreement. This morning as we prayed we had deaf mutes' ears open and speaking for the first time, blind eyes were opening and a lot of back pain just being instantly healed! What a difference from last night! I just stand in awe of how God chooses to move whenever and wherever He wants. I'm just glad I was in the right place at the right time. What an awesome morning. Praise God! Jesus, You rock!!!

Arlene:

WOOT WOOT!!! Today was kickin'!!! Yea dude forreal. After preaching by P.Tony [[[hollaaaaa!!!!]]] he had us release words of knowledge. I had like intense nose pain but I never got whoever it was. It don't matter though cuz everything that was prayed for was like BAM right there gone and done. Stomachs, Backs, Necks, Everything. Instantaneous. Yeah. It rocked. Everything was so chill. We got through prayer like BAM!!! We jumped into more praise which of course is just always fun. I still don't get the dancing here...but it's all chill. I love just being here. =D This morning was real good!!! I wish I could say more but everything was so fast that it's all just a blur of God's miracles. Yeah. well, imma hit the showers peeps. I'm getting better at Kissi, I'm learning how to ask ppl if they want prayer, what for, if they have Jesus and how they're feeling!!! Watch out...they call me Kissi Woman here...yeahhhhhh!!! They y'all be really complaining when I get home haha!!! Aight...I'm out. Peace. Miss you papa, mama, nang!!! <3 ← btw, that's a heart. <333 ← for future references, that just says lots of love. Not anything significant. =D that's a big smile, =] that's a grin, =P that's a stick-out-your-tongue face, =) and that's a smile. Blessings. Meleka Duwanom Salah.

Kathy

Ok, now that I can breath after laughing so hard at Arlene's report.....lol As everyone said above it was Thanksgiving Service Sunday. Thank You Jesus for giving us soooo much to be even more thankful for. I had a word for neck pain that radiates down the left arm and into the back, seems like twenty or thirty people responded. It is pretty hard to give a word for back pain or neck pain here because it's like DUH!!! Such a given with the way these precious people work. It was so nice working in that anointing though for sure. It was like "in the name of Jesus" and BAM healed. So cool!! The last woman I prayed for this morning was the first woman prayed for last night. She had a blind eye, and Tony had called her up as a word of knowledge. Strange thing was she never saw the healing manifest last night. She got it today though, BLIND EYE OPEN!!!! YEAH GOD!!! Thanks for sending the tootsie rolls and the stickers Nancy, today was a blast handing them out. Each kid got a candy and a sticker smack dab in the middle of their foreheads. We're off to Funyama in the morning as our first outreach stop. Thanks to everyone for praying for us.

Megan:

So I woke up this morning and saw mountains of clothes outside the bedroom window. There were literally two large mounds of clothes piled up on tarps waiting to be distributed to the pastors from the different countries that came for the conferences. After breakfast, we went outside and they distributed the clothes to each designated pastor, and they all thanked us for the ministry we have done over the last week. It's really exciting knowing that we've made history here in Foya, and that God chose US to come here and share it with these pastors and their congregations.

After taking care of the clothes, and fellowshipping with the pastors a little while, we all went to the church for a thanksgiving service. After worship, they turned the service over to Pastor Tony and he spoke on dreams, then interpreted a few from the crowd. We then gave words of knowledge and had people come up for prayer. I tell ya, I think I saw more miracles this morning than I have in any one service! Every single person I laid hands on God healed almost instantly. I LOVE it when He does that! I was not feeling good at all all morning, I had like flu symptoms. But as soon as I stood up and started praying I felt it all disappear! God's cool like that.

I prayed for two babies who had fevers, one started crying and hiding cause I was so different looking. Crazy whities. But I believe God healed her. ☺ The other one I prayed for was in a wrap hanging from her mom's back. I couldn't really feel her skin to see how she felt but I believe God healed her also. I prayed for two or three different people who had pain in their stomach, hips, and knees. All of them were completely healed! I prayed for a lady who couldn't see well at all. Right after we prayed she opened her eyes and smiled real big, and shook her head yes when the interpreter asked how her sight was. YAY! I also prayed for a girl who's feet were both very painful, swollen, and were causing her to not be able to walk right. I prayed for her and she said the pain went down "small small", so I prayed again and she said the pain was "alright". Which means all gone!

Debbie

This morning we had a small ceremony to give out the clothes we brought with us to the different pastors from different regions. The piles of clothes were huge...it's amazing when you see it all piled up. Pastor Kettor had put some clothes in with what we brought as well so it was even more amazing. This is going to bless these different areas so much! I'm so glad to be a part of it. It's a wonderful feeling and I love it!

We then went to Thanksgiving Service. They turned it over to Pastor Tony and he talked of dreams. He interpreted couple from the crowd and that was cool. The people were like...wow! Then we gave out a couple words of knowledge and a lot of people came forward. For me....every one was healed except for two people. I had one lady who cut in front of someone else that I was getting ready to pray for and wouldn't move, so I prayed for her toothache and she didn't get relief. I prayed a blessing over her and let her go. The other one was a boy who had a bleeding problem with his nose. He said it bled a lot (Arlen's word was sinuses) and I prayed for him but he didn't get relief from the discomfort. His nose wasn't bleeding at the time. I told him after I prayed for him to go over to where Arlene was praying since it was her word, but after talking to her later, I guess he never did.

Everyone else was healed. I had a lot of stomach and back pain...gone! Poor vision...restored and seeing clearly. Poor hearing...restored and hearing just fine! We had a lot of miracles this morning and it was awesome! You go God!!!!

Bobby:

The thanksgiving service really rocked! For real! No lie! I had like these totally deaf people who like couldn't hear at all so I was like 'hey dudes would you like Jesus to hook you up with some new ears?' and they were like 'yeah shiny headed white man'. So I like rebuked the deaf spirit thingy and 'BAM!' they were like ipod ready and totally not deaf anymore. It was like sooooooo totally God! Oops....sorry, I've been hanging around Arlene too long.

We had an assembly line going for awhile where deaf people were getting ears partially opened and then Kathy would pray for them and they would totally open. Pretty cool. Everyone was getting healed which was a welcome sight after struggling the night before. We're on our way back to Monrovia now with three stops on the way back. Keep on praying! There has been amazing fruit on this trip. God has truly shaken this village.
